HAUGHTON TELLS OF MANAGING BRAVES says He Will Not Use Harvard Methods and That Stallings Will Have

Much Power. Percy Haughton gave his first interview as a baseball magnate Sun-day. Never while he coached at Harvard did he talk for publication, but he says he does not intend to use Harvard methods with the Braves, and that he was silent at Harvard through no fault of his.

Haughton let it be known that Geo.
Stallings will have absolute charge of the playing end of the club. The president intends to repeat James E. Gaffney's edict against rowdyism in a speech to the players speech to the players and make a few trips with the club, but other than that Stallings will be the boss.

Haughton said: "Of course, there has been a lot of fun and joking about how the Harvard fun and joking about how the Harvard coaching system would work out in league ball. That was to be expected. There will be no college methods used, however, in the handling of the Braves. We who own the club realize that we have tackled a very big business proposition. I believe that I am the only Harvard man among the new owners. "While, to be sure, we will more that appreciate and try to retain all Harvard friendships, we will likewise think fully as much of and cater to the other baseball fans of Boston. The think fully as much of and cater to the other baseball fans of Boston. The men who have enough money to go through Harvard and enjoy more or less prosperity afterward are great friends for any business. But they should not and will not in our business have what one commentator styled the upper hand. "Naturally, while I was handling college sport at Harvard there were times when perhaps I had to be rather silent on certain subjects which might have been of public interest, but it was have been of public interest, but it was through no fault of mine. I realize now that in a way I am being tried all the time by the Boston public, and consequently will have it in mind always. I might have offered an alibi at Harvard but proferred to fight it out myself.

"Stallings is a genuine, a sort of a baseball wonder. I know very well that George can tell a real ball player by instinct. He has the knack of handling men, and getting them also, that makes a great leader. You can put it as strongly as you like that Stallings will have absolute charge of the baseball end of the Braves. To be candid, the fact that Stallings was signed as manager for a couple of years influenced me as much as anything else in deciding to buy the club.

"What George says will go all the time. I believe that when a man has a job he should be allowed to work along his own lines. Then, if he fails, it is time to break in and help. It is up to Stallings to give Boston.

a job he should be allowed to work along his own lines. Then, if he fails, it is time to break in and help. It is up to Stallings to give Boston a good National League ball team, and I believe in my heart that he will keep right on doing it as long as he cares to remain in baseball.

"I have admired Stallings from the first moment I knew him. That was last spring, when the task of coaching the Harvard baseball team suddenly fell on my shoulders. Though I had played the game and liked it. I was a bit waste on the coaching part of played the game and liked it, I was a bit vague on the coaching part of it. Consequently I looked for help. I went to see Stallings at his hotel. He was genuinely glad to see me. That first night we talked for more than five hours even though the Braves' manager was sick at the time and was genuinely glad to see hie. That first night we talked for more than five hours even though the Braves' Giants, but in 1911 McGraw decided manager was sick at the time and worried because his team was not and let him go for good. worried because his team was not going any too well. As I was leaving he insisted that I come around the next evening. I did, and very often after that. He was always wonderfully interesting. Baseball genuis stuck out all over him. He taught me more about the game in a week than I could have learned from anybody else in a lifetime.

"I met Mr. Gaffney and we became very good friends. I heard one day that he declared he would sell the Braves if he was offered enough for them. I consulted the men who are associated with me and later we began to talk prices.

"There is no room for roughneck tactics in baseball and I will not tolerate them on my club. I will probably go south with the team next month. I have been put in here to take charge of the club and watch out for all its business and I'm not going to overlook anything if I can help it."

M'GRAW PULLS BONES ON SEVERAL TRADES

Several Years ago, when John Mc-Graw asked for waivers on a player, it was a pretty sure sign that such a player was done. In fact, other managers usually considered it wisdom to stay off a player McGraw was cutting loose. There was a boast among Mac's friends that whenever he put a waiver tag on a player the unhappy youth might as well kiss his big league job goodbys. wever, in recent years conditions changed a great deal. Ames was an unlucky pitcher for the Giants, but Leon usually gave the other side a run for their money. As to Fromme, perhaps the least said about Artie the better.

Next to the Fromme deal, the swap by which Herzog and Hartley were sent to Cincinnati for Bescher was the prize boner. McGraw blames this deal on John Foster, as John B. pulled off the deal while McGraw, Comiskey and Callahan were circumnavigating was the fact that Shafer retired dur-ing the same winter, and instead of having two of the finest third base-men in the game, McGraw had only a kid shortstop to play third, Milton

However, Stock, too, was sent away to help bring the veteran Lobert to New York, and Hans was a sad fivver. As for Milton he finished the season as third baseman on the Phillie National league champions, and play-

National league champions, and played a smart, steady game. Demaree and Jack Adams, a kid catcher, also shared in worlds series money last fall, because they were sent to Quakertown in the Lobert deal.

Hank Gowdy was tossed in as excess baggage when the Giants swapped Al Bridwell to the Braves for Herzog in 1911, but it is due entirely to Mac that Long Hank is a catcher. Gowdy came to the Giants late in 1910, as a first baseman, who had hit pretty well in Texas, and for a stretch he was permitted to finish out games at first for Merkle.

McGraw, however, advised Hank to try catching, and he was an extra catcher when traded to Boston along with Bridwell. Boston used Hank as a first baseman, but he soon drifted to the International league, where he took up catching for good, and was recalled by Stallings when the Big Chief was named as the Braves' manager.

HOMERUN BAKER. Report That New York Club Will Yield to Third Baseman's Demands.

Now that Lee Magee, the former manager of the Brookfeds, has been corralled, Col Ruppert and Capt. T. L. Houston will turn their attention to Trappe, Md., and J. Franklin Baker, Connie Mack's "Home Run King," Capt. Huston returned Saturday night from Cincinnati with the signed contract of Magee and some time this week will endeavor to secure the signature of Baker to a New York American League contract.

The deal for Baker, as far as Connie Mack and the New York club is concerned, is closed. Some time ago with the assistance of Ban Johnson, president of the American league, Ruppert and Huston persuaded Connie Mack to take $25,000 in cash for the third baseman. This money was not paid over to Connie and will not be until Baker affixes his signature to a New York contract.

be until Baker affixes his signature to a New York contract.

With Baker and Magee on the team next season Bill Donovan will have an excellent chance to cop the American League bunting. Donovan, if he lands Baker, will most likely play Fritz Maisel in the outfield and Lee Magee at short. His intention juts now is to play Pipp at first and Charlie Mullen at the keystone sack. When asked the other day where he would play Lee Magee, Manager Donovan replied:

"I don't know just yet. It all depends on the players we hope to secure later on. Magee, you know, is a versatile player and is at home in any position. From all accounts we are fortunate in securing ap layer of make good in fast company.

That team perhaps could not have licked the Red Sox in the world's series, but it should have made a pretty good showing in last year's National league race, and might have made the going rather tough for the Phillies.

McGraw has had the misfortune to pull off several rather unfortunate deals in recent years, and the worst deal in recent years, and the worst deal in recent years, and the worst deal in McGraw's life was the trade with Cincinnati in 1913 by which the Reds received Ames, Devore and Grob for Art Fromme. Groh is perhaps the leading third baseman is the game today, Fritzy Maisel of the Yanks being his only close rival. Heimie is worth 17 bushels of Frommes. Red Ames was an unbucky pitcher for the

ONE-THIRD OF DEATHS FROM THREE CAUSES Shown in United States Statistics fo the Registration Area.

According to a preliminary as nouncement with reference to mortality in 1914, issued by Director Sam Rogers of the bureau of the censu department of commerce, and com by Richard C. Lappin, chief statist department of commerce, and compiled by Richard C. Lappin, chief statistician for vital statistics, more than 30 per cent, of the 898,059 deaths reported for that year in the "registration area," which contained about two-thirds of the population of the entire United States, were due to three causes—heart disease, tuberculosis and pneumonia—and more than 60 per cent, to 11 causes—the three just named, together with Bright's disease and nephritis, cancer, diarrhoea and enteritis, apoplexy, arterial diseases, diphtheria, diabetes and typhoid fever.

The deaths from heart disease (organic diseases of the heart and endocarditis) in the registration area in 1914 numbered 99,543, or 150.8 per 100,000 population. The death or mortality rate from this cause shows a marked increase as compared with 1900, when it was only 123.1 per 100,000.

The only remaining death rate higher than 100 per 100,000 in 1914 was that for Bright's disease and acute nephritis, 102.4. The total number of deaths due to these maladies in 1914 was 67,545, more than nine-tenths of which were caused by Bright's disease and the remainder by acute nephritis. Less Typhoid Mortality.

The mortality rate from typhoid fever has shown a most gratifying decline since 1900, having decreased from 35.9 per 100,000 in that year to 15.4 in 1914, or by 57 per cent. This decline has been almost as great, relatively, as that for diphtheria, and has been greater than that for any other principal cause of death. The total number of deaths due to typhoid fever in 1914 was 10,185. The marked decrease in the mortality from this disease gives emphatic testimony to the effectiveness of present day methods, not only of cure but of prevention. The efficacy of improved water supply and sewerage systems, of the campaign against the fly, and of other sanitary precautions is strikingly shown by the reduction of the typhoid mortality rate to the extent of more than five-ninths in 14 years.

At least one of the trio is understood to have the backing of a millionaire so that it is safe to set down the rating of the new owners as close to $5,000.000. The sale of the Boston Nationals to Percy D. Haughton, Arthur C. Wise and others for about $500,000. brings another group of capitalists and keen business men into baseball with resources placed at close to $30,000,000. Negotiations for the change of ownership of two other big league clubs have been under way for some time and, while the outcome is problematical, both the New York Nationals and the Cleveland Americans may have new backers before the 1916 pennant sundergoing a financial reconstruction and is on the market, but to date the grice set is considered too high by prospective investors. President Harry Hempstead of the New York Glants in has set a price for the sale of the club, but almost a quarter million dollars separate owners and bidders at this time.

Having secured one pitcher from the Federal league in the person of Earl Moseley, formerly of the Boston and member of the Buffeds, with the hope of adding him to the Red roster. Schultz is said to have been the best southpaw in the Federal league last season and member of the Buffeds, with the hope of adding him to the Red roster. Schultz is said to have been the best southpaw in the Federal league last season and member of the Buffeds, with the hope of adding him to the Red roster. Schultz is said to have been the best southpaw in the Federal league last season and has an excellent change to make give the lowest recorded rate for this disease, so the proposition of the suffed and the club, but almost a quarter million dollars and included the club, but almost a quarter million dollars and included the club, but almost a quarter million dollars separate owners and bidders at this time.
